

Create a Proper Coparent Environment

Coparenting Principle 3

Why should I help my Coparent be a good parent?

Increasing their parenting
capacity is best
for your child.

Refuse to contribute to unnecessary Coparenting conflict.

Getting back
at your Coparent...

doesn't serve your child's best interest.

A background image showing several hands of different skin tones cupping a large, glowing orange heart in the center. The hands are positioned around the heart, with fingers pointing inwards, creating a sense of support and care. The overall color palette is warm and soft, with a light beige background.

Build the struggling parent's self-esteem as a "good parent."

Traditionally, household tasks were divided based on interest and aptitude.

A large teal sunburst graphic is positioned on the left side of the image, partially overlapping the text. It features a semi-circular arc at the top and a series of sharp, triangular rays radiating from a central point at the bottom.

With
divorce,

that division is often
weaponized.

Allow your Coparent to help carry the load!

Help your Coparent become informed

engaged

capable

Think of their potential benefit to your child.

Share important information
about your child.

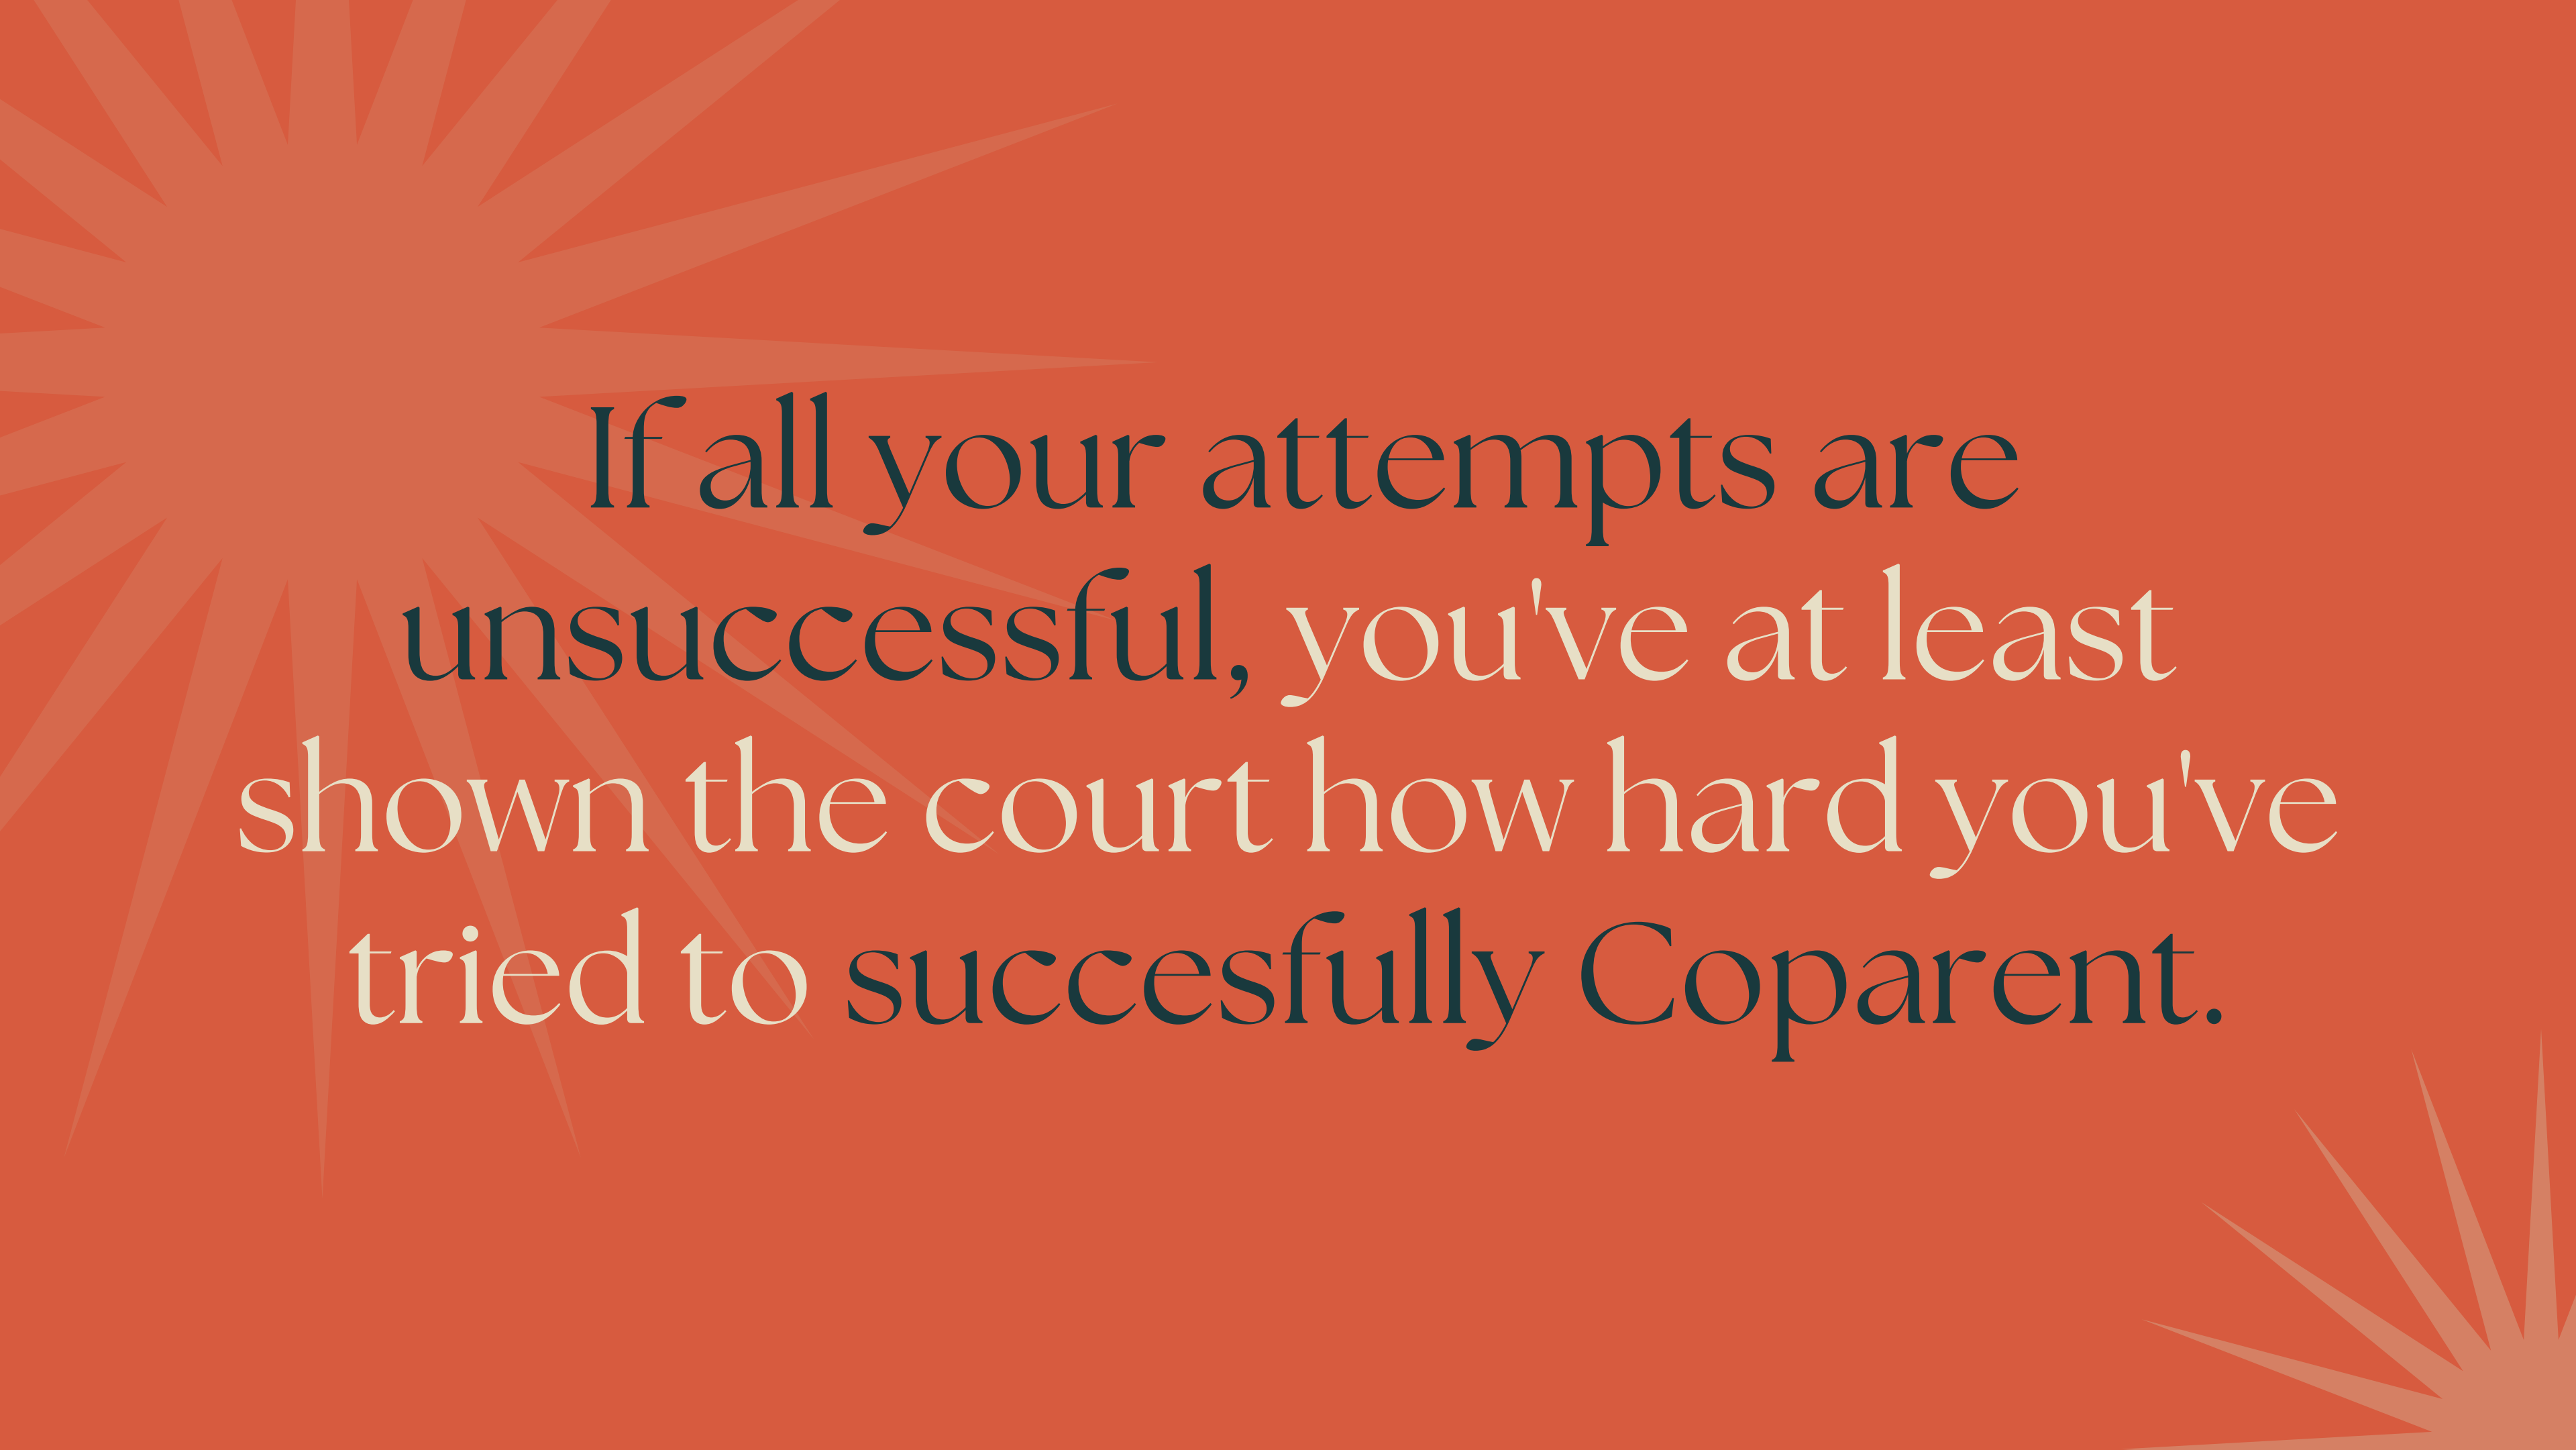

Celebrate your Coparent's
small improvements.

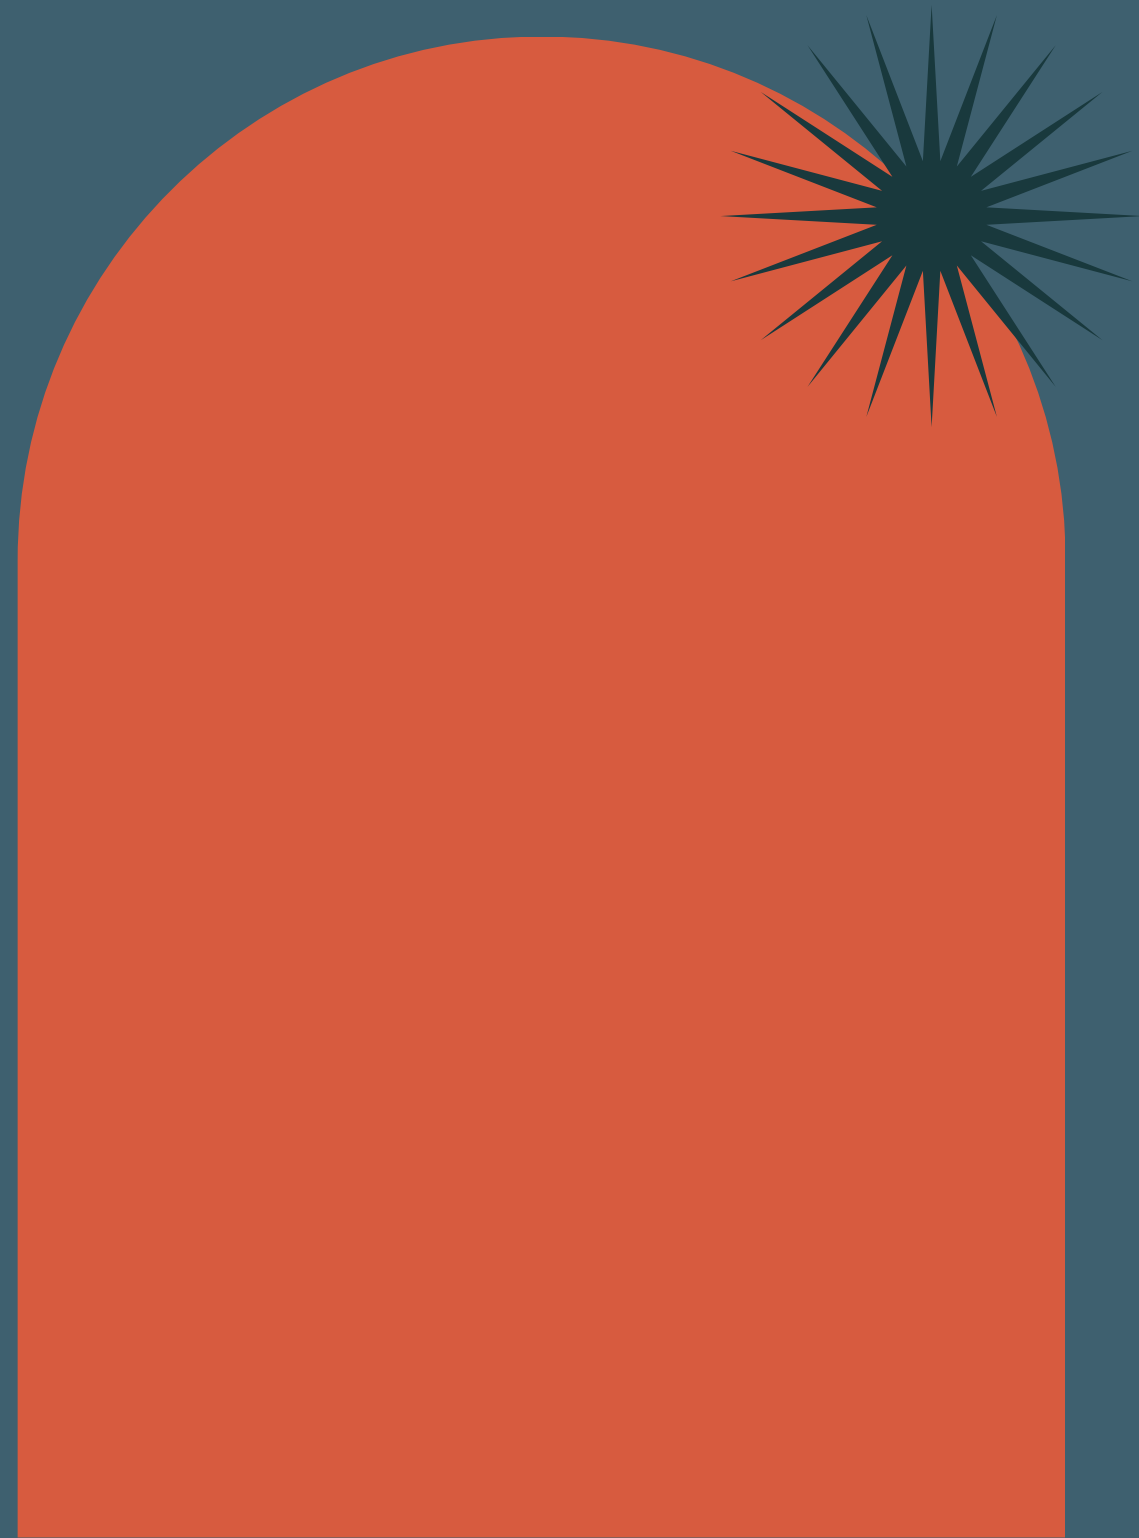

Your
parenting
burden will
decrease,

as your Coparent's capacity increases.

The background is a solid orange color with several stylized sunburst or starburst patterns. One large, faint pattern is on the left side, and a smaller, more distinct one is in the bottom right corner.

If all your attempts are unsuccessful, you've at least shown the court how hard you've tried to successfully Coparent.
